Dear Mr Ramjeet

EY RETIREMENT SAVINGS TRUST Pension Benefit Statement

Welcome to your Pension Benefit Statement which shows the value of your savings, an indication of what your savings may be worth, and what income you could buy when you reach your nominated retirement age.

Changes since your last statement

From 1 October 2023, our regulator has requested changes to the way your illustrations are calculated across the industry. This is good news as it allows pension providers to stay more consistent, making your statements easier to compare, if you have more than one pension pot.

- The projection on page 4 now shows what your full pension pot could buy you as a regular income for life (known as an annuity) without taking a tax-free cash amount. Your tax-free cash is still available when you come to access your benefits.
- We've also updated the way we calculate how much your pension pot will grow. Instead of just looking at expected investment performance, we now consider past variability in investment returns to work out potential growth. As a result, the projected value of your pot may appear a little different from what you've seen before as our growth assumptions have changed.

These changes won't affect your charges in any way.

Thinking of taking your pension money now?

If you're over 55 and thinking about taking your pension money now, usually the first 25% of your pension pot will be tax-free. After that, it's taxed as income, so if you take it all out at the same time you could be liable to pay higher-rate tax, depending on your circumstances. You may wish to speak to a qualified financial adviser. To find and compare financial advisers please visit unbiased.co.uk.

Pension scams

Beware of scammers. It's illegal to cold call someone about their pension, so your alarm bells should ring if someone contacts you unexpectedly. Be particularly wary of people that claim to be approved government advisers and try to persuade you to take money from your pension. For more information about scams and the warning signs to look out for, please see the Pension Scams Leaflet provided with this statement or view it within Your Documents section in Manage Your Account.

Planning ahead

Whatever's happening in the world today and wherever you are on your retirement journey, it's important to plan ahead. We recommend that you check your pot at least once a year. This will help you to understand how much you've saved and whether you'll have enough when the time comes for you to start accessing your pension pot. It will also show you where your savings are invested.

Don't forget to also keep your beneficiaries up to date. You can make your wishes known and ensure the right person is considered if you're no longer around to receive your benefits (just head to Manage Your Account).

Yours sincerely

More information

You can find documents on the following:

- Plan costs and charges at legalandgeneral.com/eyrst-usteedocs.
- Our TCFD report on climate change risk, Statement of investment principles and information on how the principles are put into practice in the implementation statement at legalandgeneral.com/eyrst-trusteedocs.

For information on how we invest your money, view your fund fact sheets online at legalandgeneral.com/mya or on your scheme website.

[†] Charges are made up of £13.91 for the cost of running your plan, and £143.84 for managing your pension investments (including any transaction costs you may have incurred). You can find more about transaction costs at legalandgeneral.com/transactioncosts. The charges for managing your pension investments differ depending on the fund you're invested in and they're reflected in the fund price. You'll find details of these charges in the fund factsheets online at legalandgeneral.com/mya or your scheme website. Transaction costs associated with managing your investments are included in your statement when available. On this occasion the information available to us was not complete, so we may have excluded transaction costs completely or only included some of them. This means you may have incurred additional costs. You can find more about transaction costs at legalandgeneral.com/transactioncosts or you can contact us for more information.

[^] The difference between your total fund value of £36,890.39 and your total transfer value of £36,889.30 is the outstanding estimated charges of £1.08, which were due when producing the statement. The way we calculate fund values and transfer values means they may differ by a few pence.

How much you could have, aged 65 years on 25 June 2049

Your plan could be worth
£70,600

This is just one of the ways you could use your money.

This illustration shows what you could receive every year if you purchased a regular income for life, called an annuity.

It assumes you have not taken your 25% tax-free cash as a lump sum.

That income
could be worth
£4,590.00 a year
This annual amount will be less if you take any of your tax-free cash
as a lump sum.

Things to remember

- The table on the right shows where your plan was invested on 28 August 2024, and the annual growth rate we use when projecting each fund. The growth rates allow for inflation.
 - The projection has assumed an inflation rate of 2.5% each year, this reflects that prices will rise over time.
 - We worked these figures out on 28 August 2024. We've based our projections on the basis that no further contributions will be paid.
 - Please see the Supporting Information Document for more information about the projection assumptions we've made at legalandgeneral.com/pbsinformation.
 - The income is paid in advance each month for the rest of your life only, with a guarantee to pay it for at least five years, even if you die before then. The income based on the assumed options won't increase during your lifetime.
 - The illustrated amount was calculated on 28 August 2024 and may not be the income you can get at the time you decide to take your benefits.
 - You should regularly review your investment strategy to make sure it's still suitable for you. You can find more information on Lifestyle Profiles, Target Dated Funds, the fund(s) available and where they're invested in the Fund Factsheets. Available online at legalandgeneral.com/mya or your scheme website.
- You're invested in the EY Default Lifestyle Strategy.
